RECOLLECTIONS

Grave and Gay

Mr. Horton, author of The Blight of Asia, was United States consul in Athens, Saloniki, Smyrna and Budapest from 1893 to 1924. In this entertaining book he draws on a great store of experiences garnered during a remarkably rich and full life.

A trained writer, an accomplished raconteur and possessor of a winning personality, he retails a vast collection of stories and anecdotes, both pointed and humorous, that will attract all readers in search of something piquant in the field of recollections. During his varied career Mr. Horton has rubbed shoulders with kings, princes and potentates of many lands, as well as with many famous Americans, and his glimpses and portraits of these distinguished folk are illuminating and of unusual interest, and show them to be at bottom after all very human.

Nearly every page of this diverting book will raise a smile, and many of them a hearty laugh. Mr. Horton writes charmingly. His vivacious narrative carries the reader irresistibly away to the wonderland of the Mediterranean and its classic cities, from the leisurely days of the 1890's to the stir and stress of the World War.
